ETHICS (LAW) (EHGL)

EHGL 0203. PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY. (3 Credits)
Professional Responsibility explores the rules and law governing lawyers, the way lawyers find meaning in their work, and the role of lawyers in society. This course covers the major doctrinal topics in the field, including the unauthorized practice of law, the lawyer-client relationship, finding and billing clients, confidentiality, conflicts of interest, and duties to the legal system, the profession, and non-clients. The course also introduces students to professionalism, the debate regarding the proper role of the lawyer, and the question of why lawyers have special privileges and responsibilities. The course uses old MPRE questions and other multiple choice questions to focus the readings and the class discussions.
Attributes: JD, LLM, LWPR.

EHGL 0208. PROF RESP: CORP COUNSEL. (3 Credits)
Professional responsibility for corporate counsel is a course designed for students who will likely represent public companies, either as outside counsel or as inside counsel. The ethics issues facing such lawyers are very daunting and are growing ever more complex. And the risks to such lawyers include not just violating the ethics rules governing lawyers, but also exposure to sanctions by a myriad of regulators, as well as exposure to money damage law suits. In many circumstances there are no easy answers, as different jurisdictions approach a number of situations differently. As such, law students about to join the profession need to be aware of these problems and how best to address them.
Attributes: LAWB, LLM, LWPR.

EHGL 0209. PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: CRIMINAL ADVOCACY. (3 Credits)
This seminar focuses on the ethical responsibilities of prosecutors and criminal defense lawyers. Topics include the allocation of decision-making authority, the duty of confidentiality and its limits, conflicts of interests, and ethical responsibilities in the investigation and trial of criminal cases. While focusing on the codified standards of professional conduct and other aspects of the law of lawyering, the seminar will also explore the relationship between the Constitution and professional conduct rules as well as how problems left unresolved by those rules ought to be addressed. A paper will be required. Enrollment is limited. Notes/Miscellaneous: This course satisfies the Professional Responsibility Requirement but may NOT be used to satisfy the Writing Requirement.
Attributes: INLJ, LIDR, LWPR.

EHGL 0213. PROF RSP: CIV LIT. (3 Credits)
This is a seminar on professional responsibility with a particular emphasis on ethical problems of interest to civil litigators. The text is Morgan, Rotunda & Dzienkowski, Professional Responsibility: Problems and Materials, Twelfth Edition (Foundation Press). We will use the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, and supplemented by reference to the New York Rules of Professional Conduct. Our class discussions will examine the fundamentals of the attorney-client relationship; basic duties to the client of competence, confidentiality, and loyalty; and conflicts of interest. We will also discuss the legal profession and what it means to be a professional. Specific litigation issues will include the ethical dimensions of settlement negotiations, discovery and evidence gathering and especially e-discovery (e.g., inadvertent disclosure of confidential information), ethical standards in commencing litigation, litigation tactics, and client and witness perjury, interviewing and coaching. We will review the evolving ethical issues arising out of attorney’s use of social media. We expect to have guest speakers from time-to-time. This is a collaborative seminar, not a lecture course, and active course participation is expected. This is a three credit course.
Attributes: LIDR, LWPR.

EHGL 0226. INTRODUCTION TO THE U.S.LEGAL PROFESSION. (2,3 Credits)
This course is about the professional responsibility of U.S. lawyers and is specifically tailored for International LL.M. students. As such, the course is meant to provide a holistic introduction to some of the key professional responsibility aspects that a foreign law-trained lawyer should expect to consider when working in the U.S. or dealing with U.S. lawyers from abroad. Using a textbook, the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, and the NY Rules of Professional Conduct, supplemented by pertinent cases and other materials, this course will examine the fundamental notions that govern the conduct of lawyers in relation to their clients, third parties and the courts. There will be an in-class, open-book exam.
Attributes: LLM, LWPR.
EHGL 0291. PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: ETHICS & CORPORATE LAW. (3 Credits)
This course will seek to replicate practice conditions in a General Counsel’s Office of a governmental agency. Students will serve primarily as colleagues in addressing a broad range of issues that a government lawyer might be expected to encounter in the everyday practice of law, including transactional, general advice, and litigation-oriented assignments. With some guidance, students will be expected to conduct independent legal research on the topics being covered, and a portion of every weekly seminar will be devoted to practice skills exercises: presentations to colleagues and clients, preparation of advice memos to clients, fact-finding investigations and litigation skills development. Case studies and issues will be presented and analyzed with a view towards the legal and public policy implications of proceeding down any given path. Students will also participate as “adversaries” in a variety of settings, including mock settlement discussions, mediations, and oral arguments. The semester will be divided roughly into three modules, with one significant written assignment to be completed for each module. The first module, loosely characterized as organization and governance, will look to the powers, duties, mission and responsibilities of public agencies, including how they are held accountable to the public in the conduct of their affairs. Typical constitutional issues will be addressed in this module as well, such as First Amendment rights of employees and development of rules governing expressive conduct in public places. The second module will focus on litigation topics, and will follow a multi-million dollar commercial dispute through initial presentation of a problem, pre-litigation settlement attempts, a federal court complaint, a settlement agreement and a post-settlement arbitration proceeding on an open legal issue. Emphasis will also be placed on the factual development skills needed to present or defend a summary proceeding in New York State courts (“Article 75” or “Article 78” proceedings), typical tasks needed by those who litigate for or against governmental bodies. Students will be asked to review, analyze and critique affidavits and briefs submitted in actual court cases. The final module will focus on non-litigation activities typically encountered in a law department of a public agency, such as project development and implementation, including procurement methodology and competitive bidding, environmental and public participation considerations, development and drafting of key contractual provisions in commercial or construction contracts, and consideration of employment-related issues, such as civil service and public sector labor law provisions.
Attributes: JD, LAW.

EHGL 0272. PUBLIC INT ADV SEM CSWK. (2 Credits)

EHGL 0290. CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY LAW & POLICY. (3 Credits)
This course is designed for students who are interested in understanding the legal and policy challenges facing businesses and their stakeholders. The course will cover topics such as corporate governance, sustainability, community development, and public policy. Students will be expected to conduct independent legal research on the topics being covered, and a portion of every weekly seminar will be devoted to practice skills exercises: presentations to colleagues and clients, preparation of advice memos to clients, fact-finding investigations and litigation skills development. Case studies and issues will be presented and analyzed with a view towards the legal and public policy implications of proceeding down any given path. Students will also participate as “adversaries” in a variety of settings, including mock settlement discussions, mediations, and oral arguments. The semester will be divided roughly into three modules, with one significant written assignment to be completed for each module. The first module, loosely characterized as organization and governance, will look to the powers, duties, mission and responsibilities of public agencies, including how they are held accountable to the public in the conduct of their affairs. Typical constitutional issues will be addressed in this module as well, such as First Amendment rights of employees and development of rules governing expressive conduct in public places. The second module will focus on litigation topics, and will follow a multi-million dollar commercial dispute through initial presentation of a problem, pre-litigation settlement attempts, a federal court complaint, a settlement agreement and a post-settlement arbitration proceeding on an open legal issue. Emphasis will also be placed on the factual development skills needed to present or defend a summary proceeding in New York State courts (“Article 75” or “Article 78” proceedings), typical tasks needed by those who litigate for or against governmental bodies. Students will be asked to review, analyze and critique affidavits and briefs submitted in actual court cases. The final module will focus on non-litigation activities typically encountered in a law department of a public agency, such as project development and implementation, including procurement methodology and competitive bidding, environmental and public participation considerations, development and drafting of key contractual provisions in commercial or construction contracts, and consideration of employment-related issues, such as civil service and public sector labor law provisions.
Attributes: JD, LAW.

EHGL 0291. PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: ETHICS & CORPORATE LAW. (3 Credits)
This course will seek to replicate practice conditions in a General Counsel’s Office of a governmental agency. Students will serve primarily as colleagues in addressing a broad range of issues that a government lawyer might be expected to encounter in the everyday practice of law, including transactional, general advice, and litigation-oriented assignments. With some guidance, students will be expected to conduct independent legal research on the topics being covered, and a portion of every weekly seminar will be devoted to practice skills exercises: presentations to colleagues and clients, preparation of advice memos to clients, fact-finding investigations and litigation skills development. Case studies and issues will be presented and analyzed with a view towards the legal and public policy implications of proceeding down any given path. Students will also participate as “adversaries” in a variety of settings, including mock settlement discussions, mediations, and oral arguments. The semester will be divided roughly into three modules, with one significant written assignment to be completed for each module. The first module, loosely characterized as organization and governance, will look to the powers, duties, mission and responsibilities of public agencies, including how they are held accountable to the public in the conduct of their affairs. Typical constitutional issues will be addressed in this module as well, such as First Amendment rights of employees and development of rules governing expressive conduct in public places. The second module will focus on litigation topics, and will follow a multi-million dollar commercial dispute through initial presentation of a problem, pre-litigation settlement attempts, a federal court complaint, a settlement agreement and a post-settlement arbitration proceeding on an open legal issue. Emphasis will also be placed on the factual development skills needed to present or defend a summary proceeding in New York State courts (“Article 75” or “Article 78” proceedings), typical tasks needed by those who litigate for or against governmental bodies. Students will be asked to review, analyze and critique affidavits and briefs submitted in actual court cases. The final module will focus on non-litigation activities typically encountered in a law department of a public agency, such as project development and implementation, including procurement methodology and competitive bidding, environmental and public participation considerations, development and drafting of key contractual provisions in commercial or construction contracts, and consideration of employment-related issues, such as civil service and public sector labor law provisions.
Attributes: JD, LAW.

EHGL 0292. PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: LAWYERS & JUSTICE. (3 Credits)
This course uses the specific ethical dilemmas confronting public interest and civil government lawyers as the primary resource for investigating the legal ethics rules, the role of the lawyer in society, the connections between legal ethics and political philosophy, and the influence of race, gender, and identity on the legal system. The students and the teacher work collaboratively on developing the specific curriculum for the semester. Students are required to submit a 10 page paper and, as part of a group, to develop a lesson plan and lead one class. The topic of the class and the paper can be the same. The course also requires regular class participation, although disability accommodation is available. For some class sessions, students may be asked to provide brief – one or two page – response papers. Satisfies the Professional Responsibility requirement. Attendance at the first class is mandatory.
Attributes: INLJ, LWPR.

EHGL 0320. PROF. RESPON MULTINAT. PRACTICE. (3 Credits)

EHGL 0349. PROF RES: ALTER DISP RES ETHIC. (3 Credits)

EHGL 0371. PUBLIC INTEREST LAWYER ADV SEM. (2,4 Credits)
This seminar examines issues of law, practice and theory relating to the work of lawyers in public interest settings. The principal work of the seminar is fieldwork: Students in the seminar work in small groups with other seminar students on projects in conjunction with public interest organizations, with supervision from the seminar faculty and from attorneys at those organizations. Projects have included the development of: know-your-rights guides and trainings for members of the public, reform pro bono manuals for attorneys and litigation strategy for briefs or campaigns. Seminar requirements include development of and collaboration on a project with classmates, ongoing presentations regarding the project, a final product for the organization, and an analytic paper based on the project. The seminar requires a substantial time commitment and a willingness to work in conjunction with other students and lawyers.
Attributes: JD, PIE.

EHGL 0372. PUBLIC INTEREST LAWYER ADVANCED CASEWORK. (2 Credits)

EHGL 0929. CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY LAW & POLICY. (3 Credits)

EHGL 1372. PUBLIC INTEREST LAW CSWK. (2 Credits)