LEGAL WRITING (LTGL)

LTGL 0106. Legal Writing and Research. (0 to 3 Credits)
Training in analysis of legal problems, the legal process, legal writing, and legal research. This is a small-group required course that meets weekly for approximately twelve weeks in the fall semester and eight weeks in the spring. The fall semester focuses on objective writing (law office memoranda) and common law research, while the spring semester concentrates on advocacy writing (briefs) and oral argument skills. Although the number and length of the writing assignments are uniform for all writing sections, the content of the problems varies from professor to professor. Legal research sessions, which meet in a different time slot for six weeks in the fall semester, are conducted by lawyer-librarians on the law library staff. Students learn the process of legal research using basic primary and secondary sources in both print and electronic formats. The course also introduces students to the lawyering skills of interviewing and negotiating.

LTGL 0129. Discovery Drafting. (2 to 3 Credits)
This seminar covers the preparation of civil discovery papers and related documents in a trial court. Students analyze the discovery issues raised by real cases and hypothetical fact patterns, learn how the discovery process fits within the larger pre-trial preparation process, evaluate, critique, and comment on sample discovery-related documents, and prepare various discovery-related documents, such as initial disclosures, interrogatories, requests for production, requests for admissions and deposition outlines. Students will consider special problems related to electronic discovery, expert discovery, and privilege disputes, and will be required to draft court papers common in situations involving those topics, including letters to opposing counsel, privilege logs, and motions to compel. Students will also gain some experience in specific practice skills based on the discovery and court papers drafted.

LTGL 0302. Advanced Legal Writing Strategies and Skills. (3 Credits)
The class will focus on enhancing each student's legal writing strategies and skills by engaging in a critical analysis of the trial and appellate judging processes, with a special emphasis on the influences shaping judicial decision-making. Working from an actual case currently pending in a federal or state appellate court, students will analyze and digest a trial record, assess lower court opinions and their underlying rationale, and have an opportunity to write factual statements and construct legal arguments that incorporate the policy implications of the issues reflected in the pending case, thereby moving beyond a strict rule-based analysis. The course concludes with each student having an opportunity to practice her or his oral advocacy skills before a panel of judges, professors, and/or practitioners.

LTGL 0329. Upper-Class Legal Writing Workshop. (2 Credits)
This 2-credit seminar will build on the first-year legal writing course in developing and enhancing basic legal writing skills. The primary focus will be on writing in a clear, organized, precise, and accessible fashion. Class sessions will review basic principles of good writing, covering in particular issues of structure, style, and grammar (and also analysis to the extent that good legal reasoning is essential to good legal writing). The course will consist of a series of short writing assignments in a variety of substantive areas. Students will learn to write objective, non-litigation documents that new lawyers typically produce in practice, including memoranda, letters, client advisories, judicial opinions, and simple contracts. The course will also explore the writing process (prewriting, writing and rewriting) and teach students effective techniques of self-editing. There is no final examination. Enrollment is limited to 12 students.

LTGL 0781. Commercial Litigation Drafting and Mediation. (3 Credits)
This class will focus on the practical writing, analytic and advocacy skills for litigating and settling a commercial dispute. Students will focus on strategies and briefing for a motion for summary judgment and supporting papers in connection with a paradigmatic example of commercial law litigation, and then engage in a related mediation/settlement process culminating in a settlement agreement. Based on a common dispute scenario, students will (i) draft supporting, opposing and reply litigation papers (including supporting affidavits) covering the essential elements of the claim and defenses on a motion for summary judgment, (ii) be divided into groups to engage in a global mediation process, and (iii) draft a Settlement Memorandum of Understanding and Settlement Agreement. 3 credits.

LTGL 0900. Writing Requirement. (0 Credits)

LTGL 0901. LLM Writing Requirement. (0 Credits)

LTGL 0903. MSL Writing Requirement. (0 Credits)

LTGL 0929. Contract Drafting and Negotiation for Graduate Students. (2 Credits)
This course will focus on the basic principles of negotiation and contract drafting. Special emphasis will be placed on financial and commercial contracts. The course will be divided into three parts. First, we will cover the basic principles of effective negotiation. Second, we will cover the basic principles of clear and unambiguous contract drafting including general principles of proper English usage. Finally, we will review and understand specific types of agreements. Particular attention will be given to the US financial system by studying Credit Agreements and other types of agreements typically used in financing transactions. The course is taught through a combination of lectures and hands-on drafting and negotiation exercises. The final grade will be determined on a weighted basis combining assignments and a scheduled final exam.

LTGL 0972. Fashion Law Drafting. (2 Credits)

LTGL 1225. LLM Writing Facilitation. (0 Credits)

LTGL 1929. Legal Writing and Research for M.S.L. Students. (2 Credits)
This course will introduce MSL students to the mode of writing that lawyers typically engage in (outside of the litigation context). The goal of the course is to better prepare MSL students for their law school work as well as for aspects of their professional lives in which they may interact with attorneys, corporate officers, or others with whom they need to communicate in well-crafted legal language. The course will help students write in the analytical way common to lawyers and to draft effective legal memoranda, letters, emails and contracts. One class session will introduce and be devoted to the use of standard legal citation form.
