In a business environment where startups have changed the landscape profoundly in the last decade, an understanding of entrepreneurship is key.

Entrepreneurship at Fordham is broader than simply starting a new business, it’s a mindset. It’s the creativity of approach and ability to spot opportunities that enable even those who take their MBAs to work at large, established corporations to be the ones with fresh thinking that moves their companies forward.

Entrepreneurship students have access to the Fordham Foundry, the University’s small-business incubator, where they can receive support toward launching their own businesses.
