CHRISTIAN SPIRITUALITY (M.A.)

This program is offered online or on campus.

The Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality provides preparation for work in general Christian ministry, in spiritual direction, or in preparation for an academic career in teaching. The program can also assist those who wish to complement their personal spiritual journey with an academic foundation in scripture, theology, and spirituality. Graduates of the program will have a competent understanding of methods of studying Christian spirituality along with its biblical, scriptural, and theological foundations.

Each student must pick one of three concentrations: spiritual direction, generalist, or research. Research and generalist concentrators may complete their degree entirely online, on campus, or as a hybrid program. Spiritual direction concentrators must complete their degree on campus or as a hybrid program. Intensive summer courses are also available. Scholarships and grants are available for qualified applicants.

Programs in Christian spirituality are also available at the certificate and Doctor of Ministry levels.

Concentrations

Spiritual Direction Concentration

Coursework in the spiritual direction concentration prepares you for work in retreat, campus ministry, and spiritual direction settings. It allows students to use electives to prepare for their certification as a spiritual director. Students also have access to Fordham’s excellent retreat and campus ministry programming. In addition, it may be completed on campus or as a hybrid program. Some direction courses will require a residence on campus, as well as a year long field work practicum in the New York City area (one Saturday per month, plus online meetings).

In addition to the general requirements for the Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality, students must also complete:

- SPGR 7870 — Spiritual Direction: Theology and Practice
- PCGR 6440 — Pastoral Counseling Skills
- SPGR 7740 & SPGR 7741 — Spiritual Direction Practicum I and II

Total Credits 12

1 The practicum is a yearlong experience; students gather one Saturday per month from September to May and also complete field placements and phone/hybrid meetings between campus visits.

Registration requires approval from the spiritual direction committee and your SPGR 7740 instructor, and successful completion of SPGR 7740—Spiritual Direction Practicum I.

In addition, concentrators must complete a comprehensive examination or M.A. thesis.

Generalist Concentration

This concentration allows for a broad program of study on Christian spirituality for those who do not wish to focus on research or spiritual direction. This concentration may be completed entirely online, entirely on campus or through a mix of both.

In addition to the general requirements for the Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality, students must also complete:

- Two Spirituality electives
- Two Free electives
- Total Credits

1 Spirituality electives are any course with the subject code SPGR, as well as the other courses listed below.
2 A free elective is any class within GRE. A list of these can be found on our course listing page.

In addition, concentrators must complete a comprehensive examination or M.A. thesis.

Generalist (Spirituality) electives

Courses in this group have the CSGE attribute.

In addition, concentrators must complete the following courses:

- SPGR 7870 — Spiritual Direction: Theology and Practice
- SPGR 7740 & SPGR 7741 — Spiritual Direction Practicum I and II
- PCGR 6440 — Pastoral Counseling Skills
- PCGR 6380 — Theology of Pastoral Counseling and Spiritual Care
- PMGR 6617 — Latinx Spirituality
- REGR 6170 — Spirituality and Arts
- SPGR 7760 — Christian Spirituality and Leadership
- SPGR 7870 — Spiritual Direction: Theology and Practice
- SPGR 7888 — Special Topics: Spirituality

Research Concentration

The research concentration prepares students for Doctoral programs and careers in higher education teaching Christian Spirituality. Students have access to renowned faculty and all the resources of Fordham’s other schools, centers and institutes. In addition, this concentration can be completed entirely online, entirely on campus or through a mix of both.

In addition to the general requirements for the Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality, students must also complete all the requirements for the generalist concentration, with the following additions:

Completion of an M.A. Thesis

Requires students to complete a master’s thesis, which would take the same form as the current research-oriented, Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in religious education 60-page "Major Paper."

Demonstrated Ability in a Second Language

Requires students to demonstrate competency in a second language in preparation for the research of the thesis. The master’s thesis must employ a language which is relevant to the subject being researched, and a language which is a second language for the student. Language
Christian Spirituality (M.A.)

Competency is demonstrated by the successful completion of a language examination.

Requirements
The Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality requires 36 credits for completion, including the selection of a concentration. Online and on-campus program options are specific to the selected concentration and are described in the concentrations tab.

Thesis Capstone or Comprehensive Examination Requirement (All Concentrations)

Students in the Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality program may choose to pursue either a thesis capstone or comprehensive examination option to complete their degree.

About the Thesis Capstone

Students contemplating post-M.A. studies in Christian spirituality or theology are encouraged to consider the Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality thesis capstone option. This capstone requires completing a major research paper in the academic discipline of Christian spirituality, under the guidance of a Christian spirituality faculty mentor. The research paper is typically 60 pages (including bibliography) and must conform to the most recent “Turabian” manual.

Master of Arts degree (M.A.) in Christian spirituality students must apply for acceptance into the thesis capstone option. The student application includes a (1) completed cover form; (2) a completed Research Readiness Review [RRR] form, along with the original 20-page research paper under review; and (3) proof of competency in a research language other than English, typically one of the following: French, German, Spanish, Italian, Latin, Greek, or Hebrew.

Students may petition for faculty permission to substitute an alternate research language. Translation knowledge of a research language may be indicated by exam (see the assistant dean for possible dates and locations) or coursework (two semesters of university-level courses within the past six years with a grade of B+ or higher).

Students graduating in May must submit their MACS thesis option application on or before January 20. Students are advised to first consult with a Christian Spirituality faculty member well in advance of the application deadline.
