Admissions

We have a highly competitive and selective admissions process to all our programs. Requirements for admission are a B.A. or B.S. from accredited university (or international equivalent). We highly value research experience, and we expect an undergraduate GPA of 3.5 (B+) or better for Ph.D. applicants and a 3.3 for master's applicants. Most successful candidates to the Ph.D. programs have substantial research experience in an area directly relevant to the program they seek admission to.

Our Ph.D. programs only admit students on a full-time basis, with the M.A. degree typically awarded as the first step in doctoral training. Prospective students are expected to demonstrate substantial grounding in general psychology, as well as in their specialization. Master's degree students can enroll full-time or part-time.
