

AMERICAN STUDIES MAJOR

Requirements

The benefits of the American studies major include: 1) the sharp focus brought by the American studies sequence (AMST 2000, AMST 4010, and AMST 4500), at the end of which the student completes a Senior Thesis and 2) the flexibility offered by our faculty in several different disciplines. The courses listed for the multidisciplinary requirement below are representative of the potential of the major, and change each semester.

Accepted students are expected to successfully complete 10 courses in a well-integrated program to be worked out individually in consultation with the program director.

Course	Title	Credits
AMST 2000	Major Developments in American Culture (ideally in the sophomore year)	4
AMST 4010	Approaches to American Studies	4
AMST 4500	The Senior Seminar	4
	Four required courses from one of the following concentrations:	12
	Cultural Products
	Diversity and Difference

	Three elective courses ²	9

¹ These courses are not additional requirements above the courses described above; rather, they govern the distribution of courses taken to complete concentration and open elective requirements.

² Any course with the AMST subject code or the AMST attribute code may fulfill this requirement.

Multidisciplinary Diversity

Students will also be required to demonstrate multidisciplinary diversity. Courses taken to fulfill concentration and open elective requirements must include one course in each of the following four areas:

These are not additional requirements above the 10 described above; they are rules governing the distribution of courses taken to complete concentration and open elective requirements. These courses include the following:

Availability

The major in American studies is available at Fordham College at Rose Hill and at Fordham College at Lincoln Center. Students in Fordham's School of Professional and Continuing Studies may major in American studies only if they receive the approval of their advising dean and/or department, and their schedules are sufficiently flexible to permit them to take day courses at the Rose Hill or Lincoln Center campuses.

Fordham College at Rose Hill students: The requirements above are in addition to those of the Core Curriculum.

Fordham College at Lincoln Center students: The requirements above are in addition to those of the Core Curriculum.

Professional and Continuing Studies students: The requirements above are in addition to those of the PCS Core Curriculum and any additional electives that may be required to earn a minimum of 124 credits.

Concentrations

American studies majors can tailor their coursework to their interests by selecting from a wide range of courses that fall into three areas of concentration.

The three possible areas of concentration are:

- Cultural Products: the arts, literature, thought and media. This concentration focuses on American literature, arts, media, and thought, examining their history and place in American culture and society. Students take courses in literature, film, media, music, the visual arts, the performing arts, popular culture, philosophy, and intellectual history.
- Diversity and Difference: This concentration takes up the problem of American social and cultural pluralism. Students will consider the place of categories such as race, ethnicity, class, gender, and religion in American history. Students will most likely take courses in literature, philosophy, African American studies, Latino studies, history, political science, urban studies, women's studies, religion, American Catholic studies, and sociology.

- Power, Politics, and Institutions: This concentration focuses on American society and institutions, such as politics and religion. Students will primarily take courses in political science, history, sociology, Latino studies, American Catholic studies, African American studies, and urban studies.

Four courses are required in a concentration.

Courses for the Cultural Products concentration

Courses in this group have the ACUP attribute.
