Massive amounts of data are generated when customers make purchases, go online, and even engage in social media. This concentration teaches students to harness, analyze, and produce insights from these data and find solutions for marketing-related problems.