

MEDIEVAL STUDIES MAJOR

The major consists of 10 courses drawn from seven departments: art history and music, classics, English, history, languages and cultures, philosophy, and theology. Six courses are required, as follows, with examples of departmental and program offerings that fill the requirement. The final selection of four elective courses should be determined in consultation with program advisers. A thesis option (p.) is also available for students interested in pursuing an ambitious research project as part of the major.
