Experiential Learning

The required two credits of experiential learning regarding peace and justice issues may be earned by completing two of the following short- or long-term service opportunities, or one of them twice. Most students use (6.) below (volunteer or internship work). Service learning work should be reported to the program director after it is completed, so that the credits can be recorded on the student's Degree Works page.

1. an approved course with a Community-Engaged Learning attribute (SL)
2. an approved Global Outreach trip
3. an approved program at the Center for Community Engaged Learning or other Fordham office (e.g., Multicultural Affairs, Campus Ministry)
4. an approved practicum at the Social Innovation Collaboratory
5. an approved study abroad program that includes service learning, e.g., Casa de la Solidaridad (El Salvador), Ubuntu (South Africa), or CIEE Capetown
6. other approved volunteer work or internship

To apply for approval of credits, email the program director 1) a description of the experiential learning service work and 2) the number of work hours/days.
