SOCIOLGY

Courses

Our Courses

SOCI 1025. Sociology of American Culture. (3 Credits)
A course for international students that introduces them to the study of American culture and identity, readings from the social sciences, literature, and history.
Attributes: ACUP, ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ESL, PLUR, SSCI.

SOCI 1050. Sociology Focus. (3 Credits)
Sociologists are concerned with the production of personal identity through cultural practices. In the contemporary Western context, we imagine ourselves to be individuals who are free to invent and reinvent ourselves — to "be all we can be." This ideology of self-invention, and the related value of self-reliance, have profound implications for how we live our lives, and for how we understand the lives of others. Students will investigate questions of agency and interdependence through critical readings of the autobiographies of Benjamin Franklin, Frederick Douglass, Helen Keller and others. Key sociological frameworks of analysis will be drawn from the work of George Herbert Mead, C. Wright Mills, Erving Goffman, Michel Foucault, and Nikolas Rose. Selected readings from critical disabilities studies (e.g. Robert McRuer and Rosemary Garland Thomson) will also inform course discussions.
Attributes: FRSS, SSCI.

SOCI 1100. Introduction to Sociology. (3 Credits)
An introduction to sociology with a focus on its nature as a scientific discipline. The analysis of society through the use of sociological theories, concepts, and methods. This course is required prior to all other sociology courses and seeks to stimulate students to continue to deepen their understanding of societies.
Attributes: FRSS, SSCI.

SOCI 1102. Introduction to Sociology. Health Focus. (3 Credits)
This course is an introduction to sociology with a focus on its use and application to the study of health, and is targeted specifically at students in the pre-health program. Sociological theories, concepts, and methods will be highlighted, and will be used to investigate contemporary health issues. This course seeks to stimulate students to continue to deepen their understanding of societies, cultures, individuals, and their respective health choices and outcomes.
Attributes: AMST, BESN, BIOE, SSCI.
Mutually Exclusive: SOCI 1100.

SOCI 1999. Tutorial. (1 Credit)
Independent research and reading with supervision from a faculty member.

SOCI 2200. Sociology of Culture. (4 Credits)
"Culture" is a people's entire way of life expressed in language, art, law, religion, and other collective practices such as work, leisure, sports, food, and dress. Aspects of contemporary cultures including multiculturalism groups identity, and global consciousness are studied. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS.

SOCI 2300. Social Networks. (4 Credits)
This is not a course about social media but about social structure. The heart of the social network approach is the insight that people are interdependent, and the fact that social structure emerges from regularities in this interdependence. Thus, our social networks shape our information, opportunities, values, and behavior. In this course, we will analyze social networks of various kinds with a focus on the structure of relationships (offline as well as online) and their consequences. The social network approach has been used to model friendship patterns, the spread of diseases or ideas through populations, the rise of social movements, the structure of terrorist cells, how we find information, and the structure of markets, among other topics. What this research has in common is the fundamentally sociological focus on the ways behavior is shaped by the patterns of relationships among people, organizations, or ideas. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 2410. Inequality: Class, Race, and Ethnicity. (4 Credits)
The recent history of the U.S. as a nation of distinct socioeconomic classes and the persistence of racial and ethnic conflict as a factor affecting inequality. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, PJRC, PJST, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 2420. Social Problems of Race and Ethnicity. (4 Credits)
This course explores the historical and contemporary issues surrounding the impact that race and ethnicity have in society. Students will examine how racial and ethnic criteria often guide important economic, political, and social decisions that affect access to resources by various groups and which usually have major consequences for the individual. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, PJRC, PJST, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 2425. Introduction to Asian American Studies. (4 Credits)
In the first part of the course, we will explore the politicized birth and history of Asian American studies in the U.S. We will examine race, class, gender, family, immigration and globalization, politics, and activism within the diverse Asian American community. Special attention will be taken to how Asian Americans are typically ignored as a minority racial group within the black–white binary. The second part of the course will focus on contemporary issues for Asian Americans in the post-civil rights era. We will analyze how the American empire, white supremacy, and anti-Blackness manifests in affirmative action, yellow fever, transnational adoption, the War on Terror, anti-Asian hate, and Black Lives Matter. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.
SOCI 2505. Religion and Social Change. (4 Credits)
The course explores questions about religion and social change in domestic and international contexts and how religious institutions adapt to changes in gender roles, urbanization, migration, and religious and ethnic pluralism. What roles have religious movements, including fundamentalism, played in modernization? Students examine under what conditions religion is compatible with the global spread of democracy, environmentalism or individualist conceptions of human rights. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, INST, IPE, ISIN, PJRJ, PJSJ, PJST, REST.

SOCI 2606. Social Science Statistics. (4 Credits)
Introduces the student to the basic concepts of both descriptive and inferential statistics. Both models will be presented, their assumptions delineated, and their application to research in the social sciences emphasized. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, URST.

SOCI 2607. Social Science Research and Statistics. (4 Credits)
This course provides an overview of the methodological approaches used in the social sciences, both in terms of designing research studies, and analyzing and interpreting data. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.

SOCI 2625. Data for Social Change. (4 Credits)
Data is a powerful tool that people and movements have often used to achieve social change. In this course, we will explore a number of case studies where grassroots movements and community change organizations have used data, alongside organizing and storytelling, to change policy and impact societal inequalities. Students will also learn to work with data in spreadsheets and simple database formats, creating relationships between data points, perform simple yet powerful calculations, and then visualize and present this data in both charts and maps. Students will contribute to a joint final report using NYC Open Data sources on a current and relevant topic. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 2650. Basic Research Methods. (4 Credits)
A survey of the basic tools for data collection and research design. Focus on decisions involved in the selection of the research problem, research design and the interpretation of data. Methods to be explored include participant observation, survey analysis, content analysis and the case study approach. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.

SOCI 2701. Introduction to Criminal Justice. (4 Credits)
An overview of the criminal justice system: law, its sociology, and its social and political functions. A critical examination of law enforcement agencies, the judicial system, and corrections. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, URST.

SOCI 2703. Social Deviance. (4 Credits)
The study of deviance is closely related to social power and social class. Deviance from, or conformity to, social rules or norms raises the question, Who rules? The study of deviance has been particularly concerned with issues of class, race, ethnicity, gender, and sexuality. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.

SOCI 2705. Criminal Justice Policy. (4 Credits)
This course provides an overview of policies instituted at each level of the criminal justice system including police, corrections and courts. The class will focus on evaluating the benefits, costs and possible consequences associated with these policies. Focus will also be placed on the development of criminal justice policy taking into consideration: history, context, theoretical frameworks, and political factors. Special topics that will be covered include evidence-based interventions. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 2716. Social Change. (4 Credits)
This course will critically analyze structural and cultural change in community and society; the rate, degree, mechanisms, and planning of change as well as major theories of social change. Social movements, historically, have been a major catalyst for change. Changes caused by global capitalism and the market economy in the late 20th and early 21st centuries, and reactions to these changes, will also be examined. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 2800. Sociological Theory. (4 Credits)
A survey of classical and contemporary theory that gives students a grasp of the history, nature, and significance of theory for the study of contemporary societies and sociocultural processes. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, ASHS.

SOCI 2801. Social Theory at the Cinema. (4 Credits)
This survey of classical and contemporary theory looks at sociological analysis through the lens of mainstream and independent cinema. The course considers the history, nature and significance of theory for the study of contemporary societies and sociocultural processes. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 2845. Drugs, Law, and Society. (4 Credits)
This course examines the social organizations of illegal commerce in narcotics and other drugs, looking at this transnational business from the point of production to the points of consumption throughout the world. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.
SOCI 2847. The 60s: Sex, Drugs, Rock & Roll. (4 Credits)
The 1960’s was one of the most tumultuous eras in American history, marked by a revolutionary movement led by youth struggling for freedom on many levels. African Americans, with white support, struggled against the oppression of racial segregation of the South in the Civil Rights movement: young people sought sexual freedom and the right to experiment with drugs; musicians broke away from the restraints of traditional pop and folk songs and created rock and roll; politically minded youth attacked the traditional institutions of political and economic power by protesting against the war in Vietnam; women challenged traditional male attitudes that confined them to domesticity or inferior status in the work place and in society; gays organized against the repressive laws and prejudices against homosexuality. This course will show how all of these social strands intertwined using films, music and writings from the era. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, AMST, APPI, ASAM, ASHS, ASSC, WGSS.

SOCI 2850. Methods Social Research I. (4 Credits)
Students are introduced to the fundamentals of empirical research while actively being involved in the research process by conducting their own survey. The first course includes a survey of different methodologies used by social scientists. Students gain hands-on experience in writing a literature review, specifying a research question, developing research hypotheses, designing a questionnaire and collecting data through interviewing. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.

SOCI 2851. Methods Social Research II. (4 Credits)
The second course focuses on data analysis. Students learn simple descriptive and inferential statistics in conjunction with how to use the computer. These skills provide the basis for obtaining answers to research questions and testing hypotheses so that students can write their final research reports. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: URST.

SOCI 2855. The Journalist as Sociologist. (4 Credits)
Journalists and sociologists both closely observe society with the goal of making sense of complex interactions. Their methods and techniques overlap and inform each other’s work, but they also differ in significant ways. In this class students will explore the intersecting and conflicting practices journalists and sociologists use to understand social organization. How does journalism benefit from sociological imagination? How can sociology be informed by the narrative methods of journalists? Students will study and produce journalism focused on social issues such as economic pressures in cities, neighborhood change, housing, immigration, racism, political participation, crime and social activism to understand how journalists use narrative and research, qualitative and quantitative techniques, to do a form of immediate, public, accessible sociology. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 2925. Media, Crime, Sex, and Violence. (4 Credits)
Turn on the television set, pick up the local newspaper, go on the Internet or watch a movie. Wherever you turn, you will find the media saturated with stories about corrupt cops and honest cops, drug dealers and drug users, murderers and victims, organized crime and serial killers, crusading district attorneys and defense attorneys, corrupt lawyers and hanging judges, violent prisoners and convicted innocents. How accurate are these representations? What are the ideological messages and cultural values these stories communicate? In this course, you will learn how to demystify media representations in order to understand how and why they are produced, and who is responsible for their production. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASAM, ASHS, ASSC, PJMJ, PJST, URST, WGSS.

SOCI 2960. Popular Culture. (4 Credits)
This course will investigate the nature of contemporary popular culture. How do people spend their “spare time”? Does this vary with social class? Is sport the new religion? And how does this differ from that of earlier periods and simpler societies? (Every year) Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, AMST, APPI, ASAM, ASHS, ASSC, URST.

SOCI 2966. Imagining Other Worlds. (4 Credits)
Confronted as we are by many major social problems throughout the United States and the world, is it possible to even imagine a better society than the present one. Drawing on utopian texts and science fiction novels and films, student will work in teams to blueprint a small-scale community of their choice that improves upon one that presently exists. The students will examine specific social structure such as families, educational institutions, gender relations, and political power, etc. They will work together and conduct fieldwork such as interviews, photography of sites, and graphic designs, to make a presentation at the end of the course. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 2999. Tutorial. (2 Credits)
Independent research and reading with supervision from a faculty member.

SOCI 3000. Latinx Images in Media. (4 Credits)
This class will analyze changing Latinx images in U.S. media. The emphasis will be on English-language film and television productions. Gender, color, and class issues will be examined. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, AdVD, AMST, ASAM, ASHS, CCUS, COMC, COMM, LALS, LASS, PLUR, URST, WGSS.
SOCI 3001. Ethical Issues in Criminal Justice. (4 Credits)
This course focuses on normative and applied ethics as they pertain to the policies and practice of the U.S. criminal legal system. By the end of the course, students will be familiar with ethical issues that arise in our current system of law and justice (and adjacent systems such as child welfare and family court), the contexts in which ethical breaches take place, the consequences of ethical violations, and as mechanisms for preventing and addressing them. Students also will be introduced to a framework for ethical decision making. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, PJIN.

SOCI 3002. The New Power Elite. (4 Credits)
This course involves close study of the dynamics of political, economic, and military power in the U.S. and beyond using C. Wright Mills’s The Power Elite as an historical starting point and basis of analysis. Published in 1956, The Power Elite exposed the concentration of power among corporate, state, and military elites in the postwar era and their role in what Mills described as America’s drift toward authoritarianism. Though Mills’s book was panned by leading academics at the time, it was also lauded by intellectuals and counterculture activists—and today, can be counted among the most seminal works in sociology and other disciplines. When Mills wrote The Power Elite, income and wealth gaps were at historic lows and though there was an incredible proliferation of millionaires, working class people still shared in the economic gains. Today, incomes have shrunk and the average wage is no higher than it was 40 years ago, despite increased productivity. Half of U.S. workers live paycheck to paycheck and incomes are so low that tens of millions rely on public assistance to get by. Poverty is endemic, afflicting one in five children and millions of working poor, forced to battle hunger, poor health, social ostracization, and police violence on a daily basis. Meanwhile, those at the top have never been wealthier and more conspicuous in their consumption. This course investigates theories of power and facets of social and political inequality today with a focus on elites and the economic, institutional, and ideological mechanisms they have employed over the last half century to maintain and expand their power. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, PJEC, PJST, POAP.

SOCI 3017. Inequality in America. (4 Credits)
A study of the ways in which inequalities of wealth, power, and prestige are institutionalized in complex societies. Social class and social status as they relate to other aspects of social organization and affect the life chances of individuals. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, PJRC, PJST, URST.

SOCI 3021. Sociology of Medicine. (4 Credits)
This course explores the social context of health, disease, and illness in American society. Thematic issues include the experience of illness, the medical (and other healing) professions, health care policy, and the relations between providers and patients. The effects of social inequality on health and health care delivery are probed throughout the course. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, ASHS, BESN, LPHP, URST.

SOCI 3044. Poverty and Community Development. (4 Credits)
This course is intended to provide students who have an interest in academic service learning with knowledge, skills and attitude they will need to shape their understanding of the socio-economic challenges of poverty, unemployment and inequality. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ICC, PJEC, PJST.

SOCI 3046. International Sociology. (4 Credits)
An examination of the impact of globalization on worldwide social development goals; the formation of transitional families in Africa, Asia, the Americas and Europe; family strategies of migration for social and economic gain; and, policies to safeguard the human rights of transitional families. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: GLBL, HPSE, HUST, INPE, ISIN, ISWH, LALS, LASS, URST.

SOCI 3054. Time, Memory, and Identities. (4 Credits)
Does the past shape the present or do demands of the present shape how the past is remembered? Does time exist outside of human society or is it socially constructed? What role does memory play in the way identities are shaped? This upper-level undergraduate course explores these and similar questions through the writings of scholars such as Maurice Halbwachs, Howard Schuman, Karl Mannheim, Robin Wagner-Pacifici, and Eviatar Zerubavel. The class will consist of lectures and discussions. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 3066. Global Media: Race, Class, Gender and Ethnicity. (4 Credits)
This course will include readings on global media and pay particular attention to the representation and reception of racial, ethnic, gender and class groupings in mass media today. It will also examine how television programs exported from the US have affected basic social institutions, values and perceptions of race/ethnicity, class and gender in other countries, and, in the US. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 3067. Language, Media, Power. (4 Credits)
The main objective of this course is to understand the relationship between language, media, and society, with a particular focus on the power dimension of language. The course will explore the role of language in articulating, maintaining, and subverting power relations in society, in terms of racial, gender, and class hierarchies. We will look at the dialectic relationship between language and society: language as a social practice both influences and is influenced by the structures and forces of contemporary social institutions. We will analyze the role of media in the construction and maintenance of discourses, how a particular frame is constructed and reinforced, and the social consequences of such frames. We will analyze the language on immigration, the language on reproductive rights, and the language on poverty, as paradigmatic case studies to understand the power dimension of language and media in the United States. We will also look at the role of social movements in the construction of language, and the public struggles over framing and meaning. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, COMC.
SOCI 3070. The City and Its Neighborhoods. (4 Credits)
The course will introduce students to current debates about the urban experience. We will explore a variety of themes, including immigration, race, and ethnicity, urban culture and history, urban sociology and anthropology, urban politics and policy, and urban planning. The class will help students readily available sources of data to "discover" New York City neighborhoods. The class will include several outings to different New York City neighborhoods. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, URST.

SOCI 3102. Contemporary Social Issues and Policies. (4 Credits)
Global issues such as world hunger, human rights, and nuclear war, as well as American issues concerning inequalities of wealth, civil rights, crime, family, and the role of government, are examined in this course. In addition to gaining an understanding of the social, political, and economic dimensions of these issues, students will carefully consider underlying value principles and religious ethics. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, LPGP, PJRC, PJST.

SOCI 3110. Global Conflict: Wars/Religion. (4 Credits)
Around the world, religion motivates both peace and justice efforts as well as lethal conflict. In this course, we explore the sociological context of these paradoxical dynamics and the promise of world movements aimed at a dialogue and nonviolence. An interdisciplinary perspective will introduce the student to the classical sociological studies of religion and conflict, contemporary issues of globalization, and the challenge of peaceful resolution. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, MEST, PJIN, PJST, PJST, PJJT, PJWT.

SOCI 3114. Sociology of Health and Illness. (4 Credits)
This course will focus on health, illness, and medicine from a sociological perspective. It will provide students with an overview of the development of medicine as in institution, the impact of medicine on society, the socialization of health care practitioners, the social determinants of health and illness, healthcare policies in the U.S. and around the world, and patients' experiences with illness. By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) develop an understanding of the ways in which society and medicine influence each other, (2) connect multiple social factors with people's health; and (3) grasp the construction of diverse illness identities in patients with chronic diseases. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, ASHS, ASSC, BESN, BIOE, DISA, INST, ISIN.

SOCI 3115. Pandemic and Power. (4 Credits)
The COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent global lockdown transformed the social, economic, and political significance of "health" as millions of Americans became ill and thousands died. We are all affected by this unprecedented crisis. However, while the virus itself does not discriminate, the social factors behind its spread reveal America's legacy of power and inequality. So what is the relationship between power and health in the time of pandemic? Who does benefit and lose as we face this crisis? This course will provide a theoretical and empirical foundation for students to explore these questions. We will investigate the social channels through which the health privilege is acquired and distributed as well as examine the entitlement and exclusion of different sections of society based on class and status, gender and sexuality, race and ethnicity, within and between nations, as well as within a lifespan and across generations. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 3120. Controversies in Religion and International Relations. (4 Credits)
This course examines religious and secular organizations' involvement in international policy domains such as development, humanitarian aid, human rights, STI prevention, and biological reproduction, with special attention to tensions that emerge over competing religious and cultural frameworks. We will explore how different perspectives- economic, medical, human rights, security, justice- variably prioritize or marginalize different voices, ethical considerations and potential solutions to the social problems we examine. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, ASRP, ASSC, BESN, WGSS.

SOCI 3134. Politics of Race, Class, and Gender in Higher Education. (4 Credits)
In this course, students will engage with current debates, issues, and problems associated with U.S. higher education. We will additionally examine how colleges and universities stratify, empower, and have excluded groups in the past and how they do so today. Among the questions we will explore are: What is the role of higher education in American democracy? How are college access and opportunity unequal? How have colleges been projects of nation building? How has neoliberalism impacted the college experience? Throughout the course, we will evaluate the place of Fordham University in the larger landscape of higher education. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 3136. Inequality-Why/Effects. (4 Credits)
What are the causes and consequences of inequality? Special consideration is given to the inequalities associated with class, sex and racial/ethnic membership. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LASS, LPGP, PJRC, PJST, PLUR, URST.
SOCI 3142. Environmental Sociology. (4 Credits)
This course provides an overview of the central debates in environmental sociology. We will examine the relationship between human societies and the natural environment as well as current environmental issues and relevant events from a sociological perspective. Some of the key questions that we will address include how pollution levels, waste management and resource depletion are distributed across key social categories; how societies respond to environmental risks and disasters; and how can we achieve more effective and equitable policies. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, ENST, ESHE, PJEN, PJST, URST.

SOCI 3145. Environment Technology Society. (4 Credits)
An introduction to the origins, breadth and present-day relevancies of environmental sociology. Topics include contextual analyses of philosophies of nature, historical emergence of industrial society - the nature of the materials cycle, cultural and cinematic (key films) analyses of environmental crisis, specific hands-on case studies, today's challenges and social movements, all this to bridge sociology and the natural and social sciences. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, JHP, ENST, ESHE, PJEN, PJST.

SOCI 3148. Population and Economic Development Issues. (4 Credits)
An examination of the interrelationships among development, population growth and migration. Fertility and migration (including urbanization) in the Third World will be reviewed in the context of development perspectives. The determinants and consequences of fertility and migration and their policy implications will be considered in a number of development sectors. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, GLBL, JPSE, JHST, INST, JPE, JISN, JALS, JASS, PJEC, PJST, URST.

SOCI 3149. Economic Sociology. (4 Credits)
Economic sociology is the study of how the economy intersects with our culture, institutions, and social context. In this course, we seek to understand how economic activity, including the organization of production and consumption and the allocation of work, goods and profits and other scarce resources, is shaped by social relations. We will analyze the institutional and social foundations of markets and other mechanisms that facilitate the interaction of individuals, groups, institutions, societies and their environments in making their livelihoods, covering a variety of topics including information and uncertainty, economic inequality and stratification, globalization, social networks in markets, finding jobs, black markets, the market for human organs, and corporate crime and malfeasance. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS.

SOCI 3151. Sociology of Education. (4 Credits)
We spend a great deal of our youth in school. As taxpayers, our dollars provide major funding for school systems. Through a study of the current goals, functions, and structures of educational institutions, how these have changed over time, and how they are interrelated to other major institutions insociety, students will gain insights into social factors affecting their own experiences and their responsibility as taxpayers, as future parents, and, for some, as future teachers. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: LPGP.

SOCI 3152. Sociology of Sports. (4 Credits)
In all societies, sports and athletics are socially organized into official events, group rituals, tests of manhood, areas for the expression of political sentiments. In modern societies they have become major industries (and their players, cultural heroes and celebrities); spectator sports and their audiences are important features of post-industrial societies. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, SJOR.

SOCI 3154. Political Sociology. (4 Credits)
This course will examine, discuss, and debate how power is distributed within and amongst groups on the local, national, and international levels. Some of the topics explored include the Elite, Pluralist, Marxist, Realist, and Corporatist perspectives; trends in democratization, voting, and political participation; the ideologies and utopian visions that sometimes motivate political action; the role of the media and special interest groups as agents of political socialization; and the global dominance of the West. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 3242. Mental Health and Human Rights. (4 Credits)
This multi-disciplinary course examines mental health institutions and practices through the lenses of human rights and civil liberties. Course material focus on social, political, and economic factors that have shaped accepted understandings and treatment of mental illness historically and into the present, and various ways that gender, race, class and sexuality have played into societal distinctions between sick and well. Some specific topics include forensic psychiatry, civil commitment, deinstitutionalization and homelessness, diagnostic inflation, coercive forms of treatment and social movements advocating for the rights of individuals who receive mental health intervention. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: PJRC, PJST.
SOCI 3249. For the Death of Me! Socio-Cultural Perspectives on Death and Dying. (4 Credits)
The primary goal of this course is to explore the social and cultural implications of the biological experience of human death and dying. Examples of topics that will be covered include: mortuary rituals and funerary behavior, the cultural construction of death, the effects of death on the social fabric, morning and bereavement, end-of-life issues, as well as ethical and moral issues relating to death. Throughout the course, we will examine the fascinating variety of social and cultural responses to the biological fact of death. In doing so, we will explore Anthropological and Sociological literature that seeks to explain or interpret that tremendous variety. The course will be cross-cultural in its outlook and will require students to make conceptual connections between theoretical literature and empirical observations. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, BESN.

SO CI 3255. Sociology of Media. (4 Credits)
This course examines the role of the media, particularly the news media, as a dominant institution in a contemporary democratic society. Students will examine news media content, the structure of news media organizations, and the relationship of news media organizations to other dominant institutions. The materials used for examination will be a variety of contemporary case studies. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASAM, ASHS.

SO CI 3256. Political Sociology in Film. (4 Credits)
Film has played a central role in shaping the political landscapes of the 20th and 21st centuries and our collective understanding of them. The objective of this course is to enable students to read and analyze global and domestic politics through the medium of film and provide them with a firm grasp of theoretical and empirical issues in contemporary world politics from a sociological perspective. This course makes use of documentary, short- and feature-length films to interrogate key themes in political sociology and analyze the most important political developments of our time. It also aims to provide students with an appreciation of the complex relationship between art and politics, history, and mythology. Substantive areas of study will include: (1) terrorism and war (including civil war, military intervention, and the Cold War); (2) globalization, human rights, and “development”; (3) transnational and domestic social movements; (4) democratic and undemocratic political regimes; and (5) colonialism and imperialism. Readings will be drawn primarily from the field of sociology but also from political science, history, and film and cultural studies. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, POSC.

SO CI 3260. Politics of Reproduction. (4 Credits)
The biological reproduction of the human species is a complex process that engages all major institutions of society: family, religion, morality, health, economy, and government. Using cross-cultural and social historical materials, this course will examine cases in which the control over reproduction is contested, focusing on such issues as family limitation, new reproductive technologies, and child custody. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, BESN, BIOE, GLBL, INST, ISIN, PJGS, PJST, WGSS.

SO CI 3325. America Divided: Economic Inequality and Political Polarization in the 21st Century. (4 Credits)
This course examines the historical causes and consequences of rising socioeconomic inequality and political polarization in the United States. We focus on structural patterns and everyday experience of economic inequality, as well as their intersection with forms of racial and gender discrimination. Special attention is given to relations in the workplace and the labor market. Finally, we seek to understand the impact of these processes on our institutional politics and democratic governance of our society, and to consider how collective action and alternative policies might address these concerns in the U.S.
Attributes: EP3, URST.

SO CI 3401. Gender, Crime, and Justice. (4 Credits)
This course describes, explains, and challenges the treatment of men and women victims, offenders, and workers in the criminal justice system. In the process, we will examine and critique a) theoretical and empirical approaches to gender and crime, b) the role of the criminal law, and c) our responses to crime and victimization. Issues of race, class, and sexuality will also be raised. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, HPSE, HUST, PJCI, PJGS, PJST, WGSS.

SO CI 3405. Gender, Race, and Class. (4 Credits)
This course examines the relationship between gender, race, and class as overlapping dimensions of social experience in the U.S. Drawing on a variety of sources, including theoretical, ethnographic, and literary writings, each of these dimensions is considered as part of a complex approach to social problems. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AFAM, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, LPGP, PJGS, PJIN, PJRC, PJST, PLUR, URST, WGSS.

SO CI 3406. Race/Social Construct. (4 Credits)
This course concerns the evolution of racial typologies and classification system in the U.S. We will draw on a variety of texts from natural and social sciences, law, and literature to examine how “scientific” typologies of race are actually more reflective of power dynamics and social hierarchies than biological or genetic differences. Our goal is to understand the continuing significance of race in terms of social and economic power, as well and individual self-conceptualizations and identity politics. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, URST.
SOCI 3409. Race and Gender in Visual Culture. (4 Credits)
This course will explore how different racial, engendered and class elements affect visual culture. Particular emphasis will be placed upon the cultural production in the Americas but this will be contrasted with other areas and regions from today's globalized and migrant world. The students will be taught how to assess visual culture and the varying powerful and multi-faceted medium it represents. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, CCUS, COMC.

SOCI 3410. Migration/Globalization. (4 Credits)
The study of immigration and migration has become more important as the movement of people around the globe has increased in magnitude and frequency. The course will focus on migration in the context of globalization, that is, the growing integration of economics and societies around the world. We will also give attention to assimilation, transnationalism, the state and the regulation of immigrants and selected topics such as gender, culture and family. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, HPSE, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, PJRC, PJST.

SOCI 3415. Development and Globalization. (4 Credits)
This course will investigate development and globalization issues. Initially taking a broad theoretical approach and then delving into specific nation-state case study examples, students will be challenged to consider how globalization in terms of technology-based interconnectedness, cultural Westernization, economic liberalization, and political/social democratization is changing the lives of people throughout the world. Aspects of integration, assimilation, and reactionary movements and trends will be explored. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, INST, IPE, ISIN, LASS, URST.

SOCI 3418. Contemporary Immigration in Global Perspective. (4 Credits)
Over the past decades, immigration has again transformed the United States. It is also producing significant changes in other countries, from the European nations that used to send their citizens to the United States more than a century ago, to oil-rich Middle Eastern states and developing nations. This class explores multiple questions related to immigration: Why do people migrate across international borders? Can states control migration, especially “unwanted” migrants? We examine the policies that let some people in, while keeping others out and then consider incorporation, the process by which foreign “outsiders” become integrated in their new home. Are immigrants and their children becoming part of the U.S. mainstream? What is the mainstream? The arrival of newcomers also affects the cultural, economic, political and social dynamics of the countries and communities that receive them. How do sociologists evaluate and theorize immigrant integration? Finally, the course looks at topical debates around membership, including citizenship. The large-scale movement of people raises questions about belonging, nationality, and social cohesion. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, HPSE, HUST, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, PJRC, PJST, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 3419. Living in the Shadows: Undocumented Migration. (4 Credits)
This course explores the lives of undocumented students in the United States. The first portion of the course will identify the socioeconomic and political institutions that created the “illegal immigrant” problem and how the U.S. government, civil society, immigrant advocates, artists, and humanitarians have approached the issue. The second portion of the course will discuss how undocumented students navigate the education system, public spaces, and work life in the U.S. Finally, we review previous “solutions” to the undocumented immigration “problem”, what were the outcomes of those decisions, and what we can learn from these previous attempts. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, ASSC, LALS, LASS.

SOCI 3425. Racial Segregation: An American Story. (4 Credits)
In this course, students will focus on the African American struggle for civil rights and social justice during the era of legal segregation, a system of oppression that began after the Civil War, enforced by unjust laws, rigid social codes, and violence. Focusing on Black agency and resistance, students will learn how African Americans subverted segregation whenever and wherever they could, as best they could, and by whatever means available. This resistance helped lay the groundwork for the civil rights movement. Yet, despite the movement’s triumphs, the ideology of segregation is still embraced by millions of Americans, who often use “color-blind” language to mystify its practices. Students will explore how and why the history of segregation still informs current race relations in America, and how Black and white Americans are working together in common cause to eradicate it. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, HIST, HIUL, LALS, LASS.

SOCI 3426. Race, Racism, and Whiteness. (4 Credits)
Normally approached from the standpoint of people of color, analyses of race and racism in America remain incomplete without a consideration of the particular historical, cultural, and epistemological dimensions of whiteness. In this senior-level special-topics course, students will critically examine this legacy from an anti-racist perspective. After reviewing canonical observations about whiteness by Black intellectuals’ including W.E.B. Du Bois, James Baldwin, Frantz Fanon, and Bell Hooks, students will have an opportunity to consider more recent submissions to the field of critical whiteness studies, including the historical work of figures like Noel Ignatiev, as well as cultural analyses by figures like Richard Dyer. In addition to coming to a greater appreciation of the particularities and contradictory dimensions of whiteness (a category that , even in critical race theory, is often rendered as an abstract universal), students will work toward devising an understanding of what might constitute an effective anti-racist practice for white people today. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: AMST.
SOCI 3427. Hispanics/Latinos in the USA. (4 Credits)
Explores the Hispanic mosaic in the U.S. Special emphasis is given to Hispanic education, culture and assimilation; the political significance of Hispanics; issues of gender, color and race; and work and the changing economy. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMCS, AMST, ASHS, INST, ISLA, LALS, LASS, PLUR, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 3428. Asian American Immigration and Community Organizing. (4 Credits)
This course explores the birth of Asian American studies within the lens of U.S. immigration policy and race-based exclusion. The first portion of the course will review the institutional exclusion and discrimination that Asians faced within the U.S. immigration system prior to the 1960s. We will examine Asian agricultural laborers, specific court cases, anti-miscegenation laws, naturalization, and the lack of family reunification. The second portion will examine the political and ethnic organizing that led to the birth of the term “Asian American studies” in the 1960s. Special attention will be given to the ties to cross-racial coalition building, community organizing, and examining major events such as the LA Uprisings and the murder of Vincent Chin. The last portion of the course will evaluate what the Asian American studies movement has achieved in the last fifty years and the future of the movement. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: AAST.

SOCI 3450. Transnational Social Movements. (4 Credits)
Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, INST, ISIN, ISWH.

SOCI 3456. Modern Social Movements. (4 Credits)
Social movements in the 20th and 21st centuries have been vehicles of political protest, social change, and sometimes resistance to change. Under what circumstances are social movements successful and what has been their impact on American institutional life and popular culture? In addition to providing a general and theoretical assessment of social movements, this course introduces students to particular movements that have formed over such issues as racial and gender identity, war, conditions of labor and economic change, and human and democratic rights. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, PJEN, PJSSJ, PJST, PLUR, WCSS.

SOCI 3457. Medicine, Science, and Social Movements. (4 Credits)
This course examines the political dimensions of medicine and science through a focus on the roles that they have played in movements for and against social change. Topics include the role of physicians and scientists in supporting or opposing social change in fields such as women's rights, LGBTQ rights, medicinal marijuana, and nuclear disarmament. It also examines conflicts over medicalization and medical labeling, with examples including anti-psychiatry movements, activism against ableism, and transnational conflicts over culturally contested practices. A third focus is on the role that health crises, such as pandemics, have played in creating the conditions for social movement emergence, growth, and decline. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attribute: ASSC.

SOCI 3460. Sociology of Emotion in Public Space. (4 Credits)
As we move from a print-oriented society to a visually-oriented society, display of emotion in mass publics establishes new forms of social interactions. The social arenas that we inhabit become real-life stages of presentation of self and observation of others, which ultimately establish imagined public communities that inform our perceptions of public life. This course explores social arenas such as public parks, memorials, stadiums, and public street life within the context of media, race, class, sex, culture, and the globalized community. Individual and group performances in these spaces establish dramas where authenticity is perpetually sought after in the hope of discovering life-affirming experiences. Through the use of selected readings, films, and lectures, the course emphasizes sociological insights on our role as participants in emotional dramas in public. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 3470. Global Refugee Migration. (4 Credits)
This course is designed as a survey of the major issues associated with the subject of refugees. We shall proceed by dealing with a series of different themes including defining a refugee, causes of refugee situations, asylum and protection, emergency relief and non-governmental organizations, the impact of refugees on receiving countries, resettlement and repatriation. The last four weeks of the course will focus on the Middle East and Africa. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: INST, ISIN, PJST, PJWT.
SOCI 3471. Undocumented Migration. (4 Credits)
The undocumented category is technically not a "legal" category but is indirectly established by immigration law as it creates categories of admission. The number of undocumented immigrants began to increase after the 1965 amendments to the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, which restricted immigration from Latin America. Between 1990 and 2007, the number of undocumented immigrants living in the United States tripled but then stalled and declined slightly, perhaps as a result of the Great Recession. Although the majority of the undocumented are from Mexico and the popular stereotype is of migrants sneaking across the Southern Border, this category is composed of all individuals who entered the country without inspection, as well as visa overstayers; it thus includes people from every region of the world. The class will explore these dimensions and other aspects of the contemporary situation of undocumented immigration and immigrants in the U.S. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, URST.

SOCI 3500. Contemporary Family Issues. (4 Credits)
This class focuses on the sociology of the family by exploring issues relating to the status and functioning of families in contemporary United States society. The issues examined include sexuality, childbearing, divorce and remarriage, domestic violence, links between generations and the current state of social policy. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS.

SOCI 3502. Work, Inequality, and Society in 21st Century America. (4 Credits)
How has the world changed and what will it look like in the future? How will it meet the needs of those entering the job market, & how can we democratically govern the conditions of the employment? This course examines the organization and development of labor markets and work in the contemporary United States. Topics will include the structure of occupations & the growth of service, information and "creative" sectors: the changing character of jobs and the rise of "precarious" labor; discrimination and access to opportunities: the interaction of gender, work and family; wages; income inequality & the provision of benefits like health insurance and retirement security; unions and movements for economic justice. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, URST.

SOCI 3503. Work, Family, and Gender. (4 Credits)
This course examines how two key institutions in society – the workplace and the family – interact with one another. Special emphasis is placed on the critical ways that work-family balance and conflict are conditioned by gender. The course will cover the impacts – both negative and positive – of work demands upon individuals’ family lives, as well as the effects of family obligations upon workers and workplaces. Students will be familiarized with voluntary responses to work-family challenges on the part of individuals, families, and employers, as well as relevant public policies in the U.S. and around the world. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, WGSS.

SOCI 3505. Coming of Age: Adulthood. (4 Credits)
What does it mean to become an adult in the contemporary United States? In what ways do young people have control over their futures, and how are their choices shaped and constrained? This class will use the "life course paradigm," as well as perspectives drawn from psychology and other social sciences, to understand the transition to adulthood. Topics include class, race, and gender variation in the coming of age process; career aspirations; the school-to-work transition; early and on-time parenthood; and leaving/returning to the parental home. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ASSC, WGSS.

SOCI 3506. Diversity in American Families. (4 Credits)
This course focuses on the forms and structures of the family with emphasis on practices and ideologies, and how they vary by race/ethnicity, immigration status, gender, and sexuality. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, ADVD, AMST, ASSC, LALS, LASS, PLUR, WGSS.

SOCI 3507. Queer Theory. (4 Credits)
Drawing on aspects of poststructuralist theory to extend the critical insights of post-New Left movements for gender and sexual liberation, queer theory has since the mid-1990s become a major intellectual current in a variety of cognate fields including sociology, anthropology, women's studies, cultural studies, media studies, and more. In this senior-level special-topics course, students will familiarize themselves with key themes and debates in queer theory through a critical evaluation of canonical works by figures including Adrienne Rich, Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, Judith Butler, Jose Esteban Munoz, and Lee Edelman, as well as through an assessment of the observations of detractors like Adam Isaiah Green. Following the work of Jasbir Puar, the course will conclude with an analysis of "pink washing" and the corresponding incorporation of queer issues into the hegemonic national projects of Israel and the United States. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, PLUR, WGSS.

SOCI 3601. Urban Poverty. (4 Credits)
This course deals with contemporary issues and problems in cities, with a special focus on residential segregation and urban poverty. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, LALS, LASS, LPGP, PJEC, PJST, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 3602. Urban Sociology. (4 Credits)
One of the most significant developments in human history has been the development of cities. This course will examine the evolution and contemporary characteristics of cities in sociological perspective. The course includes a descriptive overview of the growth and development of cities and a discussion of the current state of urban America. Particular attention will be paid to New York City. We will also analyze various theoretical approaches to understanding urbanization, such as the human-ecological and Marxist theories. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ACUP, AMST, APPI, ASHS, PLUR, URST.
SOCI 3603. Urban America. (4 Credits)
This course offers an introduction to urban sociology and to the study of American urban society. Particular attention will be paid to New York City. Topics include the rise of "global" cities like New York, metropolitan growth and inequality, urban policy, and politics, patterns of class, racial, and ethnic group formation, and local community organization. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, ASSC, PJRC, PJST, PLUR.

SOCI 3606. The Global City. (4 Credits)
What's so special about New York? Why have we come here? What binds so many diverse people together? The answer to these questions is usually contested, but the debate in urban sociology has increasingly had to do with the concept of the "the global city." The globalization paradigm started in the 1970s when the importance of cities grew as the continued relevance of national boundaries was increasingly questioned. This class will trace the historical emergence of the global city, covering the economic restructuring of the 1970s, the central theoretical literature, and several thematic topics exploring new neighborhood dynamics, labor relationships, new forms of segregation and fragmentation, as well as changing issues in central aspects of urban life, such as public space, shopping and consumption, immigration, etc. We will maintain a special focus on New York City, and by the end, you will have your own answers to such timeless urban questions. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, ASSC, URST.

SOCI 3610. The Family. (4 Credits)
The study of American family patterns within the context of cultural variations throughout the world. Course will examine past myths about the American family; present trends in American family life, such as changing sex roles, new concepts of child rearing, and adjustment of kin networks to metropolitan settings; and newly emerging forms of marriage and the family. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, ASHS, ASSC, WGS.

SOCI 3621. Soc Is Social Filmmaking. (4 Credits)
With wars and terrorism rampant throughout the globe, polarization in religion and politics, challenges to sexual freedom and democratic social movements, explosions of unimaginable wealth amidst unbearable poverty, and countless other social narratives both hidden and apparent, it is the documentary filmmaker in the trenches who records, analyzes, and preserves in word and image the momentous events taking place here and now. This course looks at the role of documentary filmmakers in today's society as they capture and expose to public view the great upheavals of our times and the power struggles that lie behind them. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS.

SOCI 3623. Film and Religious Experience. (4 Credits)
Film and the Religious Experience is designed to give students a lively and challenging introduction to the major themes of religion from a sociological perspective, using film as the catalyst. The course will combine lectures with group discussion inspired by screenings (comprising Hollywood classic and contemporary films, early silents, documentaries, and experimental works) and readings (foundational texts by Durkheim, Weber, and William James to more recent books such as Religion in Film, John R. May and Michael Bird, eds.). The focus will be on the Judeo-Christian tradition and the Americas, but will also include some discussion of Eastern religions and alternative/outlier communities. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 3670. Hispanic Women. (4 Credits)
An examination of the changing roles of Hispanic women with regard to Hispanic men, motherhood, the labor force experience, sexual awareness, media myths, political and economic power and women's liberation. The structural position and changing concepts of Hispanic women in the Americas will be examined through the lenses of analytical work and literature. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ACUP, ADVD, AMST, ASHS, ASSC, LAHA, LALS, LASS, PLUR, URST, WGS.

SOCI 3708. Law and Society. (4 Credits)
How and when did law originate? What functions does law serve to the society and to the individuals within that society? Students will examine theories of jurisprudence and alternative sociological perspectives dealing with selected legal and constitutional issues in the United States and Europe. Particular attention is focused on legal policy and social change. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC.

SOCI 3710. Violence and Politics. (4 Credits)
From the Battle of Blair Mountain to the recent explosion of riots in the wake of Darren Wilson's exoneration in Ferguson, Missouri, the story of American politics is indelibly marked by violence. Sometimes embraced, often denounced, but even more often sidestepped, debates about violence have tended to return (like all repressed phenomena do) with a frequency that only underscores their Importance. In this interdisciplinary undergraduate seminar, students will draw upon the insights of Sociology and other disciplines to assess America's social, historical, and cultural relationship to political violence. After reviewing theories of political violence by thinkers like Walter Benjamin and Carl Schmitt and subjecting foundational texts by figures like Thomas Jefferson and Louis Adamic to analytic scrutiny, students will consider important case studies including the historic split between Civil Rights and Black Power in the late 1960s, the Stonewall Rebellion of 1969, feminist engagements with violence after the second wave, and debates about violent tactics in the anti-globalization and Occupy movements. The course will conclude with an analysis of the ubiquitous and refracted forms of violence that pervade contemporary American culture (e.g. In video games) and an inquiry into recent police and vigilante violence against young Black men, including Oscar Grant, Trayvon Martin, and Michael Brown. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS.
SOCI 3711. American Criminal Justice. (4 Credits)
This seminar course focuses on the administration of criminal justice and its relation to society, the police, prosecutor, defense attorney, judge, jury and correction agency. Observations at the courthouse allow for examination of constitutional rights, plea bargaining, jury selection, insanity defense and media coverage. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ASSC, URST.

SOCI 3713. Criminology. (4 Credits)
This course surveys the state of knowledge and theories explaining criminal behavior and attempts to control it by society. Although the sociological perspective on crime is emphasized, class discussion and the text attempt to examine the subject from a multidisciplinary point of view, especially with respect to legal, biological, and psychological views of crime. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASSC, LALS, LASS, LPGP, PJJCJ, PJST, URST.

SOCI 3714. Terrorism and Society. (4 Credits)
This course examines the history and societal causes of terrorism in its many forms, and the state’s and society’s counter-terrorist response. Among issues to be examined are the nature of terrorist ideology and the source of support for, and opposition to, terrorism among the people that terrorists claim to represent. Other issues to be examined are prevention preparedness and emergency responses to terrorist attacks, and political, civil, and human rights challenges faced by countries dealing with terrorism in the 21st century. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASSC, LALS, LASS, LPGP, PJJCJ, PJST, URST.

SOCI 3720. Mass Incarceration. (4 Credits)
This course considers what the disciplines sociology, the law, public health, and social work contribute to our understanding of the causes and consequences of mass incarceration in the US. We will consider underlying assumptions about drug use, justice and punishment; how social forces (e.g., religion, the economy, Jim Crow, and politics) have shaped official responses to drug use and other social problems; and examine the social, legal, public health, and economic consequences of mass incarceration and the War on Drugs for individuals, families, communities, and contemporary society. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, PJJCJ, PJST, PLUR, URST.

SOCI 3730. Crime in Time and Space. (4 Credits)
One of the most consistent findings in criminological research is that crime is not evenly distributed within the environment. This begs the question: why is crime concentrated in certain areas, times and seasons? In this course, students will be introduced to the theoretical and empirical research that has attempted to explain these processes. Students will also be introduced to spatial analysis using geographic information systems software packages including ArcGIS. Special topics that will be covered include homicide, burglary, robbery, and assault. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ICC.

SOCI 3800. Internship. (3 Credits)
Internship.

SOCI 3806. Interpersonal Behavior and Group Process. (4 Credits)
Groups we associate with and the organizational settings in which we interact provide important contexts that shape what we do and even the identities we assume in everyday life. The study of social roles, selves, and identities. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 3999. Tutorial. (3 Credits)
Independent research and reading with supervision from a faculty member.

SOCI 4004. Art Worlds: Anthropology and Sociology Perspectives. (4 Credits)
The study of culture generally, and art world more specifically, allows us to understand the arts not only as aesthetics experiences, but also as institutional, economics, social, and political phenomena. Incorporating methods and insights from sociology and anthropology, and drawing on the resources of the immediate context of New York City’s cultural communities and institutions, the course will introduce students to issues in and methods for cultural analysis. The analysis of art worlds will include: 1) a consideration of the intentions of creative agents or producers; 2) the distribution of these objects within particular systems; and, 3) the reception and interpretation of these objects by and within particular social groups or communities. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ICC.

SOCI 4010. Taming “Wicked Problems”: Social Science Research and Solutions Lab. (4 Credits)
Public health and safety, education policy, gun control, worker’s rights, housing policy, environmental sustainability, infrastructure, digital privacy rights, civic engagement, energy policy, inequitable access to health care, and criminal justice reform: These issues lie at the heart of our communities, and tackling the challenges they represent requires us to abandon siloed thinking in favor of bringing multiple bodies of knowledge into the spaces where policy can be crafted to make people’s lives better and more fulfilling. This course centers on interdisciplinary approaches to the identification, analysis, and proposal of evidence-based policy solutions for complex social, environmental, and economic problems facing 21st-century communities (i.e., “wicked problems.”) Students will enhance their competencies in conducting applied, policy-relevant, and participatory action research through Solutions Lab projects focusing on “wicked problems” and will be equipped with the normative, affective, and cognitive skills and tools to actively and effectively engage in data-informed action for community betterment and social justice. Course materials will cover the theoretical foundations, conceptual scaffolding, and methods for distilling specific, concrete problems from larger ethical, cultural, and moral debates—and identifying possible solutions to those problems. It will be conducted using a workshop format and will be informed by perspectives and methodologies derived from sociology, political science, public policy, history, social justice, development, and human rights. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, ICC.
SOCI 4020. Place, Space, and Immigrant Cities. (4 Credits)
This course will introduce students to the main issues and current debates on immigrant minorities in large urban areas. Due to their density, cities represent microcosms of interaction and identity formation among and between different minority and majority groups. This often manifests itself spatially, as certain neighborhoods become areas of residence and territorial concentration for immigrant minorities. In the process of settling, immigrants also start identifying strongly with their spaces of settlement. This course will trace the historical patterns of this process, as well as explore its contemporary manifestations, as cities are being rediscovered and "gentrified," rendering their neighborhoods into fierce battlegrounds of spatial contestation. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ICC, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, LPQP, PJRC, URST.

SO CI 4052. An Ethics of Modern Selfhood: The Pursuit of Authenticity. (4 Credits)
The modern and postmodern self or identity, examined as a series of personal and moral conflicts and dilemmas. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: CCUS, COMC, COMM, ICC, THEO.

SO CI 4105. Religion, Gender, and Sexuality. (4 Credits)
This course considers the intersections of religion, gender, and sexuality. In many parts of the world, including the United States, and in many religious traditions, cultural and religious identity and continuity hinge on gendered practices and closely controlled sexual regimes. The goal of this course is to understand how religious institutions, communities, doctrines, practices and traditions shape gendered ideologies and practices, debates about sexuality and gendered division of labor, and the lives of men and women who participate in these religious communities. The course is organized conceptually; rather than learning about specific religious traditions, we will discuss thematic issues at the intersection of religion, gender, and sexuality. At various junctures we will discuss specific examples that span religious traditions, geographical locations, and historical periods. The course will therefore provide students with a sense of how contemporary and seemingly local debates are rooted in much broader conversations. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, ASHS, ASRP, BESN, ICC, INST, ISIN, PLUR, REST.

SO CI 4245. Ethics in Research. (4 Credits)
This course will examine approaches to responsible research practices across the natural and social sciences, with particular attention to research involving human participants. The course will provide an overview of the research process, foundations in research ethics, and provide examples of research across disciplines that exemplify scientifically valid and ethically sound research methods planning, implementation, and dissemination. In particular, the course will draw on long-standing research traditions in the field of sociology, and psychology in order to provide a foundation upon which ethical issues can be discussed. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: BIOE, ICC, PYCA.
Prerequisite: PSYC 1200.
SOCI 4444. Unstrange Minds: On the Ethical Dimensions of Neurological and Cognitive Difference. (4 Credits)

Human neurological and cognitive differences have long been areas of contestation and have generated varied judgments and values, along with social policies and practices, regarding the value of human beings with cognitive, neurological, or psychosocial (mental health) differences and impairments. Persons with such differences have been vilified, isolated, segregated, forced to endure dubious “cures” (even exorcisms), subjected to forced sterilization, and, all-too-frequently, murdered. On some occasions, they have been valorized, represented as super-functioning. Often, social practices and policies with regard to the treatment of such individuals are justified as “social goods,” even when policies result in their immiseration and extermination. Those deemed feeble-minded, moronic, epileptic, mad, or otherwise impaired were considered a threat to society’s resources and well-being in the moment—and its future. This course will revisit the rhetoric, practices, and policies regarding neurologically divergent persons and their treatment in light of recent social movements for disability rights, specifically those advocating for the rights of neuro-diverse persons. Topics of discussion will include the legal precedents of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, as well as IDEA and recent challenges to “the capacity contract,” scientific developments (particularly genetic and neuroimaging technologies) that suggest newer, “kinder” pathways to a eugenically constructed social order; the convergence of racialized and class-based understandings of intelligence in the 20th century and the present; and the limits and bounds of parental and states’ rights in relation to the medical treatment of their children (whether surgical or hormonal sterilization or vaccination avoidance). Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ASSC, DISA, DIUL, EP4, VAL.

SOCI 4500. Demography and Data Analysis. (4 Credits)

This course explores the three demographic phenomena of fertility, mortality, and migration through applied data analysis. Students will learn leading demographic theories, as well as the quantitative methods, used by demographers to test these theories. Emphasis is placed on research skills development and the presentation of demographic research. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, ASSC, IPE.

SOCI 4900. Internship Seminar. (4 Credits)

Placement in a work setting of their choice provides students with an opportunity to assess their own career goals, while simultaneously enriching their understanding of how social groups function. Issues and topics from the sociology of formal organizations, including work role socialization, the organization as a social system, the bureaucracy and its public, formal and social processes in organizations, managerial ideologies and the relation between character and career are discussed. Placements must be obtained through the Internship Program located in the Career Planning and Placement Office. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 4902. Internship Seminar: Community Organizations. (4 Credits)

This seminar explores the context, forms, and goals of community organization in the United States with a focus on urban, social, and environmental issues. Class meetings with proceed in tandem with students’ internship placements in local community-based organizations or other agencies. Students may choose their own internships, and assistance will be provided to help those in search of placement. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: AMST, LALS, LASS, URST.

SOCI 4961. Urban Issues and Policies. (4 Credits)

A discussion of urban issues and policies. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, ICC, LALS, LASS, LPGR, PJRC, PJST, PJST, URST.

SOCI 4962. Health/Inequality in the US. (4 Credits)

This course examines the patterns and causes of health inequalities across key social groups in the United States. Grounded in a sociological approach to health, students examine how the distribution of money, resources, and power creates marked differences in the social and physical conditions within which we live our lives. These conditions, known as the “social determinants of health,” contribute greatly to the formation of health inequalities. Examples of the social determinants that are examined include race/ethnicity, social class, gender, sexual identity, immigration/nativity status, and residential location. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ICC, PJEN, PJST, PLUR.

SOCI 4963. Population and Society. (4 Credits)

This course provides an introduction to the core areas of social demography (fertility, mortality, and migration) along with some other areas that demographers study (health disparities, residential segregation). Students will also be introduced to the data and methods used in demography, including mortality and fertility rates, the life table, and life expectancy. Note: Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ASSC, SOCI.

SOCI 4965. Science Fiction and Social Crisis. (4 Credits)

The course presents science fiction as a literary genre, one that does not attempt to give us an image of our future, but rather provides a unique social critique to defamiliarize and restructure our own reified present. Through its strategy of indirection, science fiction reflects on the object and ground of all human life, while itself being a reflection of its time. The genre often draws upon science and technology to create thought experiments of alternate utopian and dystopian worlds. As a literary form, science fiction has evolved from its pulp fiction origins in America for a mass audience to a highly creative art form practiced by some of the most outstanding writers of our time. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

Attributes: ACUP, AMST, ASHS, ICC.
SOCI 4970. Community Service/Social Action. (4 Credits)
This course will deepen students' understanding of the meaning of community service and social action in America and challenge them to confront the moral issues and social commitments necessary to be members of a just democratic society. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ADVD, AMST, APPI, ASHS, EP4, LALS, LASS, PJCP, PJCR, PJST, SL, URST, VAL.

SOCI 4971. Dilemmas of the Modern Self. (4 Credits)
Modern selfhood or identity is studied as a series of conflicts or dilemmas "What is a self today?" What are the special problems of ourselves as modern and post-modern "subjects?" Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: AMST, APPI, ASHS, EP4, VAL.

SOCI 4990. Conflict Resolution and Justice Creation. (4 Credits)
This course examines the psychological, social, and philosophical foundations of peacemaking and conflict resolution drawing on theories and experience from sociology and philosophy, and to some extent theology. The course will include experiential exposure to workshops on conflict resolution and non-violent social action techniques, drawn from social justice organizations. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.
Attributes: ICC, INST, ISIN, LALS, LASS, PJCP, PJCR, PJST.

SOCI 4998. Senior Thesis. (4 Credits)
Independent research under mentor guidance. Four-credit courses that meet for 150 minutes per week require three additional hours of class preparation per week on the part of the student in lieu of an additional hour of formal instruction.

SOCI 4999. Tutorial. (4 Credits)
Independent research and reading with supervision from a faculty member.

Courses in Other Areas
The following courses offered outside the department have the SOCI attribute and count toward the Sociology major and minor.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Credits</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>AFAM 4105</td>
<td>Queer Caribbean and Its Diasporas</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ANTH 3339</td>
<td>Irish and Mexican Migration: New York Focus</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ANTH 4341</td>
<td>Race, Sex, and Science</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ENST 3308</td>
<td>Catastrophe and Human Survival</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FITV 4676</td>
<td>Television and Society</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LALS 3670</td>
<td>Hispanic Women</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LALS 4105</td>
<td>Queer Caribbean and Its Diasporas</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PJST 3200</td>
<td>Environmental Justice</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SOCI 4963</td>
<td>Population and Society</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THEA 4050</td>
<td>Arts, Social Justice, and Human Rights:</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Foundations</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WGSS 4341</td>
<td>Race, Sex, and Science</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WGSS 4400</td>
<td>Gender, Bodies, and Sexuality</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>